Uncle Tom's Cabin by Manikins at the Brandeis Stores

The shades of Simon Legree, Uncle Tom and Little Eva would have to break the mournful pall in which they are shrouded in the popular imagination by indulging in a hearty laugh if they could see the manner in which they are burlesqued by the dramatic manikins in the mechanical representation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" presented by Harry Deaves and company at the Brandeis stores. On a minute stage erected on the third floor of the Brandeis stores adjacent to the toy department the marionettes bring laughs where the characters of the original book brought sob and weeps.

The act is instantly popular with the crowds of kiddies who attend the performances. A little theater has been erected so that all who attend may be seated comfortably.

Performances are given continuously from 9:30 to 11 o'clock in the morning and from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Deaves and his associates will be at the Brandeis stores until Christmas. His repertoire will be varied, his next show to be a travesty on "Little Red Riding Hood."
